Re: LiveTV Purchase of Verizon Airfone Network

Dear Current Customer,

As we announced on June 9, 2008, LiveTV LLC, a leading provider of in-flight entertainment and connectivity systems for commercial airlines, announced it had reached an agreement to purchase the Verizon Airfone network and assume Airfone business operations beginning January 1, 2009.

As a current Magnastar customer, we wanted to reach out to you to explain our plans relating to the network and the general aviation market.

First, you can be confident that your current service will continue beyond 2008. We will continue to provide ongoing support to the network and its customer base. Service agreements will automatically renew for a one year term from January 1, 2009 to December 31, 2009. Pursuant to previous communications sent to you by Verizon Airfone, this renewal is automatic and does not require you to do anything. The Terms and Conditions of the service agreement will be the same as the current agreement with Verizon Airfone.

Second, we plan to enhance the Airfone network to support our next generation in-flight connectivity product called "Kiteline". The Kiteline service -- which allows users with Wi-Fi enabled BlackBerrys and laptops to send and receive personal and corporate email, as well as access online content such as Amazon.com -- has been in use on a single JetBlue A320 aircraft named "BetaBlue" for over nine months and has received outstanding reviews. As the name implies, the BetaBlue aircraft is our "beta lab" and we continue to use it to develop software and services that will ultimately serve the broader marketplace.

As we look to the future, we are committed to bringing the full line of LiveTV products and services to the general aviation market. We view this market with great excitement and look forward to the opportunity to work with you and your organization in the months ahead. We will work hard to serve you and meet your connectivity and entertainment needs now and in the future.

Sincerely,
